General Michael Flynn celebrated the Fourth of July by reciting the oath to the Constitution - followed by the slogan for the far-right QAnon movement.

Flynn, President Donald Trump's former national security adviser, shared a video of himself leading five friends and family members in the oath on Twitter on Saturday night while they celebrated Independence Day in a backyard.

Each member of the group held up their right hand as they repeated after Flynn: 'I, [insert name], do solemnly swear that I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter: So help me God.'

The use of the slogan appeared to bolster mounting claims that Flynn is embracing his fan base within the QAnon movement.

Flynn has long played a central role in QAnon lore, which includes the belief that the government persecuted him by charging him with lying to the FBI about his dealings with Russian officials under Special Counsel Robert Mueller's sweeping investigation into members of Trump's campaign. Flynn is pictured after his sentencing hearing in 2018

While Flynn has not directly expressed his support for the movement, his latest video will likely fuel speculation that he's involved.

After reciting the oath and the QAnon slogan, the group cheered 'God Bless America!' and pumped their fists in the air.

Flynn tagged several people in his tweet, including his attorneys Sidney Powell and Molly McCann, his sisters Barbara Redgate and Mary O'Neill, brothers Joseph and Jack Flynn and his wife Lori Andrade.

He also included the hashtag #TakeTheOath, a trend where people renew their pledge to uphold the constitution in the face of growing unrest in America.
